A Weekend Full of Surprises

Last weekend, our class went on a two-day trip to a national park. We left early on Saturday morning and travelled by bus for almost three hours. When we arrived, the weather was cloudy, but the guide assured us it wouldn't rain.

Our first activity was a short hike through the forest. The path was narrow and sometimes difficult, but the guide helped us and showed us interesting plants and animal tracks. At one point, we stopped near a waterfall, where we took photos and had a short break.

In the afternoon, we visited a small visitor centre. There, we watched a documentary about the animals living in the park. Some students were surprised to learn that wolves still live in the area. The guide also told us what to do if we ever meet a wild animal.

Later, we arrived at a wooden cabin where we were going to spend the night. We worked in groups to prepare dinner, and although it wasn't perfect, everyone enjoyed the experience. In the evening, we sat around a campfire, told stories, and listened to the sounds of the forest.

The next morning, the weather was much better. Before leaving, we had time to explore the area again. Many students said it was one of the most exciting trips they had ever had, even if some parts were a bit challenging.
